The IAIP International Congress is a vital meeting place where colleagues can jointly build an “Adlerian home” capable of facing today’s complex and uncertain world. It offers psychologists, educators, therapists, and researchers a shared space to reconnect with the Adlerian principles of community feeling, social interest, sense of mastery of life and holistic growth — a solid compass amid social fragmentation and digital acceleration.

Coming together strengthens belonging and mutual responsibility, countering extremism and the erosion of authentic relationships. The Congress becomes a laboratory for thinking and acting together, renewing our professional and ethical commitment to hospitality, respect for diversity, and constructive dialogue.

Taking part means more than updating one’s skills: it means actively contributing to a resilient Adlerian community, ready to respond creatively to the challenges of contemporary life.

CALL FOR PAPERS

An international space where Adlerian colleagues from different countries share their studies and clinical experiences is a powerful engine of professional growth.

At the Congress, confronting diverse methods, results and clinical reflections offers constant “food for thought” that refines our diagnostic and therapeutic tools.

Listening to others’ work helps each of us question our assumptions, broaden our perspectives and update our skills in line with new scientific and social challenges.
